

Why taxation reform is doomed

The problem

What is taxation if not 'From each according to their means, to each according to their needs'.

Hence it looks very much like the democratic method of collecting taxes in order to 'run a country' is nothing more than a variation of the theme of the 'Libertarian Communist Society' – see <http://flag.blackened.net/daver/anarchism/mlc/mlc6.html>.

The differentiation between those with 'means' and those with 'needs' depends upon birthright, opportunity, luck or having a brilliant criminal mind.

The one thing in common for those with 'means' revolves around the fact that the people involved appear to have the highest common factor of wealth. The one thing in common for those with needs revolves around the fact that the people with 'needs' appear to have the lowest common denominator of poverty!

A workable solution

A common value system which serves both those with means and those with needs, enabling all human beings within society to be capable of identifying and prioritising their needs and want in term of the common values.

This common value system will work for all forms of government.

Forms of government – See http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Form_of_government

- Anarchism
- Aristocracy
- Autocracy
- Democracy
- Despotism
- Dictatorship
- Meritocracy
- Monarchy
 - Absolute monarchy
 - Constitutional monarchy
- Ochlocracy
- Oligarchy
- Panarchy
- Patriarchy
- Plutocracy
- Gerontocracy
- Technocracy
- Theocracy
- Tyranny